Lecturer in Statistics

The Department of Statistics at the University of Florida invites applications for a full-time academic year Lecturer position to begin in August 2013. The position requires a masters degree in statistics or a closely related field; a PhD is preferred. Primary duties include the teaching of undergraduate statistics courses. Applicants with a PhD will also be expected to teach graduate level service courses.

The role of lecturers is highly valued by the department and the university. To encourage and facilitate their professional development, lecturers at the University of Florida are eligible for promotion through the ranks of Lecturer, Senior Lecturer, and Master Lecturer. Applicants with sufficient experience may be hired at the rank of Senior Lecturer.

Interested applicants should submit a vita, transcripts and three reference letters to Statistics Lecturer Search Committee, PS#00009172, PO BOX 118545, Gainesville, FL 32611-8545. Review of applications will begin on 12/10/2012 and continue until the position is filled. Candidates for employment are subject to a pre-employment screening which includes a review of criminal records, reference checks, and verification of education. The department is committed to diversity as a component of excellence: minorities, women, and members of under-served groups are encouraged to apply.
